BSL, El to run all night on summer weekends

24-7. SEPTA will decide after a three-month window whether to reinstate the all-night service.

Conrad Benner worked for a cafe in Center City earning $8 an hour, with minimum tips, while living in Fishtown in his late teens and early 20s. He would finish his shift around 1 a.m.

"And I would just take a cab home," the now 28-year-old said. "Literally a third of my pay that day."

He couldn't take SEPTA's NiteOwl buses, because, let's face it: "They take an incredible amount of time, and I had to close so I didn't have time to wait 45 minutes for a bus that may or may not come. And if it did come, [it] would be crowded and kind of creepy," he added.

For those in similar situations, SEPTA has made some changes.

Officials announced this week that it would institute a pilot program this summer that would keep the El operational from 5 a.m. Friday until midnight Monday morning starting in June. No specific date has been set.

While it's still pending board approval, officials have set aside between $100,000 and $200,000 in the operating budget to start the pilot program. The program will start in mid-June and will run through Labor Day weekend. It would offer 24-hour service for the weekend on the El and Broad Street Line. Right now, the El stops running around 12:30 a.m.

And those NiteOwl buses will not be in service.

"It was the early '90s when we switched over to the NiteOwl buses," said SEPTA spokesman Andrew Busch. "And a lot has changed."

Center City blossomed. The Millennials, that age-group between 19 and 34, aren't as keen about buying cars and buying houses because of college debt and low-paying jobs. So, they moved closer to the their jobs in the city and bicycles and public transportation became the preferred modes of transportation for their daily commutes. Also, more and more, empty-nesters are moving closer to Center City for convenience and accessibility.

"Philadelphia is seeing an increase in population," Benner said. "Young people are going to college here and are staying here. I'm glad SEPTA has sort of stepped up and realized this."

Quoted

"The reason we're looking at this is because we do think the demand is there, but the pilot gives us the ability to take a good look at it and put us in a strong position to make a decision from there." Busch

The petition

Benner, who runs the popular website streetsdept.com that showcases city street art, created a petition to extend El hours to 24-7, 365 days a year. More than 2,000 signed the "SEPTA 24-7" petition.

- "We appreciated his interest," Busch said, "but we've been looking at doing something like this before the petition came along."
- Benner quipped: "SEPTA plans a lot of stuff, but they don't seem to necessarily enact a lot of stuff, so I'm glad we could push them in one way or another."

PATCO. Construction starts on parking lots

Construction has started on a $2.6 million, seven-month project that will improve the parking lots at PATCO's Collingswood and Ferry Avenue stations, officials announced.

All asphalt will be removed as well as portions of concrete curb and sidewalks, according to a news release. Parking lots will remain open in both stations throughout the duration of the projects. However in Collingswood, there will be fewer parking spaces available. After construction is complete, 80 new permanent spaces will be in.

Delaware River Port Authority Acting CEO John Hanson said neighbors will hear some construction noise "but as work progresses, PATCO customers will notice the improvements" and the lots will hold more vehicles.

Ferry Avenue is expected to have sufficient capacity, according to the news release, to handle the overflow.

This project is the last stage of the $9.8 million, multiyear effort to repave all parking lots and access roads at PATCO stations. METRO

A 31-year-old man was shot and killed outside a nightclub in University City early Tuesday, police said.

The man, whose identity has not yet been revealed, was shot at 1:32 a.m. outside the Copacabana at 40th and Spruce streets.

"No ID for the suspect is being released yet at this point because we're waiting on charges," police spokeswoman Jillian Russell said on Tuesday.

Russell did say a suspect was in custody.

The victim was pronounced dead at the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania at 1:42 a.m. TOMMY ROWAN

Change. Mayor will sign order reforming ICE hold policy today

Mayor Michael Nutter will sign a long-awaited executive order on Wednesday to modify the city's policy for complying with Immigration and Customs Enforcement hold detainers, a move that local immigrant advocacy groups lobbied for passionately at a City Council hearing in March.

The mayor's spokesman, Mark McDonald, declined to comment on the executive order ahead of the signing.

But immigrant advocacy groups are already claiming victory.

"We are incredibly proud to say that we will now have one of the most progressive policies in the country which, in practice, will end the use of ICE holds in our city," said Erika Almiron, executive director of Juntos.

The Inquirer previously reported that Nutter intends to change the ICE holds policy to only apply to individuals charged with violent felonies.

"Enacting this policy sends a clear message that Philadelphia will not participate in a process of backchanneling our family, friends and neighbors, into a mass deportation effort without due process and accountability," said Mia-lia Kernan, a 1Love Movement organizer. SAM NEWHOUSE

ICE holds

Currently, if Philadelphia police make an arrest, individuals with questionable citizenship status will be referred to ICE.

- If ICE issues a hold detainer request, police hold the individual until ICE can review the case, sometimes leading to deportation.

District attorney pushes review of innocence claims

Justice. The D.A.'s office is instituting a new partnership with The Innocence Project to resolve questionable criminal verdicts.

District Attorney Seth Williams announced Tuesday he has opened a new unit focused entirely on investigating wrongful conviction claims.

The PA Innocence Project will refer vetted innocence claims to the Conviction Review Unit for processing.

"This is all part of an ongoing effort to ensure that we're not locking up the wrong people," said PA Innocence Project legal director Marissa Bluestine.

The new unit will be led by 27-year veteran prosecutor Mark Gilson.

"We're open to the fact that mistakes can happen, and it's certainly possible that someone innocent could end up in jail," Gilson said.

Gilson cited the infamous Lex Street Massacre case, which he prosecuted. Charges were dropped against the first four suspects after "reasonable doubts" arose, Gilson said.

"That wrong was righted," Gilson said, who later successfully prosecuted the four actual killers.

The PA Innocence Project, based at Temple Law School, will refer vetted cases to the new unit.

"This is the right thing to do," Williams said in a statement. "But let's be clear, this is not a get-out-of-prison free card for convicted felons. While we are looking at these cases with an open mind, it does not mean that we will agree with all or any new claims of innocence and or evidence."

Police say 'Cash 4 Gold' owner sold stolen loot

Police are seeking the rightful owners of jewelry that may have been stolen and was found for sale at a Port Richmond shop after the owner was arrested for selling stolen goods.

Meir Cohen, 48, was arrested on March 20 on charges of tampering with records after an undercover detective allegedly sold Cohen, who owns Cash 4 Gold on Aramingo Avenue, a stolen bracelet.

Cohen allegedly did not verify the ownership of the goods or record the sale, as is required by law.

Police were led to Cohen after an admitted jewel thief told police he had sold some of his finds to Cohen. METRO

Boston. Voices of gratitude, defiance at bombing memorial

GETTY IMAGES

Vice President Joe Biden joined other leaders and survivors of the Boston Marathon bombing to share messages of thanks and defiance on Tuesday at a tribute to the three people killed and 264 wounded in the attack exactly one year ago.

From Patrick Downes — who lost a leg when a pair of homemade bombs ripped through the crowds at the race's finish line — to Biden, speakers recalled how those on the scene, from police officers to spectators, reacted immediately to help the wounded amid the chaos on April 15, 2013.

Former Boston Mayor Thomas Menino, who managed the response to the attack in the final year of his two decades in office, recalled the struggles of the families of Martin Richard, 8, Krystle Campbell, 29, and Chinese national Lu Lingzi, 23, who died in the largest mass-casualty attack on U.S. soil since Sept. 11, 2001.

"We would never wish the devastation and pain we have experienced on any of you," Downes said. "However, we do wish that all of you, at some point in your lives, feel as loved as we have every day of this past year."

Following the ceremony, the crowd walked down Boylston Street, the final stretch of the marathon, amid heavy rain and high winds to watch officials raise an American flag at the finish line.

At 2:49 p.m., the time the first bomb went off, the city observed a moment of silence. Afterwards, churches throughout Boston tolled their bells and ships in the city's harbor sounded their horns.

Federal prosecutors contend that a pair of ethnic Chechen brothers placed the pressure-cooker bombs at the race's crowded finish line and three days later shot dead a police officer in an unsuccessful attempt to steal his gun. REUTERS

White supremacist charged with murder

The suspect in the killing of three people at two Jewish facilities near Kansas City over the weekend could face the death penalty on state murder charges filed Tuesday, prosecutors said.

Frazier Glenn Cross, 73, who also goes by the name Glenn Miller, likely will face federal charges that also could carry the death penalty in the killings Sunday afternoon in Overland Park, Kan., an upscale suburb of Kansas City, Mo.

Cross was known by law enforcement and human rights groups as a former senior member of the Ku Klux Klan movement and someone who has repeatedly expressed hatred for Jewish people. None of the people he is accused of killing were Jewish.

Prosecutors charged Cross on Tuesday in Johnson County, Kan., with one count of capital murder in the fatal shooting of Reat Underwood, 14, and his grandfather William Corporon, 69, outside a Jewish community center on Sunday.

MH370. Undersea drone hunt for plane may take two months

A U.S. Navy underwater drone sent to search for a missing Malaysian jetliner on the floor of the Indian Ocean could take up to two months to scour a 600 square km area where the plane is believed to have sunk, U.S. search authorities said on Tuesday.

The prediction coincided with the end to the abbreviated first mission by the Bluefin-21 autonomous underwater vehicle six hours into what was meant to be a 16-hour operation on Monday after it exceeded its 14,750 feet depth limit and was automatically returned to the surface.

The introduction of the undersea drone marks a slower paced phase in the search for Malaysia Airlines MH370 which disappeared on March 8. REUTERS

Ukraine launches 'special operation' against separatists

Ukrainian armed forces on Tuesday launched a "special operation" against militiamen in the country's Russian-speaking east, authorities said, recapturing a military airfield from pro-Moscow separatists.

Gunfire could be heard from the airfield at the town of Kramatorsk after a fighter jet swooped low over the area. Ukrainian troops were seen disembarking from helicopters.

Ukraine's acting President Oleksandr Turchynov had earlier announced that a military operation was under way to flush pro-Russian separatists out of the government buildings and facilities they have seized in about 10 towns and cities in the east over the last few days.

Turchynov issued a statement saying Ukraine had retaken the airfield in Kramatorsk from pro-Russian militants, while the state security service said an "anti-terrorist" operation was in progress against separatists in the nearby town of Slovyansk.

The operations appeared to mark an escalation of the deepest East-West crisis since the Cold War. The standoff has raised fears in the West and in Kiev that Russia might intervene militarily on behalf of Russian speakers in eastern Ukraine, following its annexation of the Crimean region last month in response to the overthrow of Ukraine's pro-Moscow president, Viktor Yanukovych, after weeks of protests.

Earlier, pro-Russian militants who had been holed up in the Kramatorsk police headquarters since Saturday left the building — but a state security official in Kiev said separatists had then taken over the agency's offices in the town. REUTERS

Customer service. US Airways investigating pornographic tweet

US Airways said it was investigating a pornographic tweet on Tuesday sent on its Twitter account in response to a customer complaint about a flight delay, which went viral on social media.

US Airways issued an apology on Monday immediately after deleting the tweeted photograph of a naked woman lying on a bed with a toy airplane between her legs, said Davien Anderson, spokesman for US Airways.

Anderson said US Airways, part of American Airlines Group Inc., was investigating the mishap. So far it has determined that the photo was originally posted to its Twitter feed by another user, but was inadvertently included in its response to the customer.

"We deeply regret the mistake and we are currently reviewing our processes to prevent such errors in the future," Anderson said.

US Airways tweeted the photo to the Twitter alias @ElleRafter, according to an archived image of the tweet, which has since been deleted. REUTERS

Prosecutor wraps up Pistorius grilling

The prosecutor in the murder trial of Oscar Pistorius ended his five-day cross-examination of the double amputee track athlete on Tuesday with a stark summary of how he shot his girlfriend, insisting he killed her deliberately after an argument.

"You fired four shots through the door whilst knowing that she was standing behind the door," said prosecutor Gerrie Nel, known in South Africa as "The Pitbull" for his hectoring style of questioning.

"She was locked into the bathroom and you armed yourself with the sole purpose of shooting and killing her."

"That is not true," said 27-year-old Pistorius, who faces life in prison if convicted of murder.

The Olympic runner has broken down in tears on many occasions during the questioning, and at one point retched into a bucket on the witness stand after being shown grisly pictures of Reeva Steenkamp after the shooting on Valentine's Day last year. REUTERS

Osbourne and Hilton fight over a table

Paris Hilton and Kelly Osbourne, both members of famous families and natives of the reality boom of the early aughts, should be the best of friends. And yet, it appears, they are not. Go figure.

Both TV personalities were at Coachella this weekend (along with Nina Dobrev from "The Vampire Diaries," Leonardo DiCaprio and that sketchy temp from your office who called in sick on Monday), and apparently Kelly Osbourne got a rude awakening about her level of remaining fame.

Kelly and friends were hanging out at a VIP table at the Neon Carnival, according to Page Six, when management asked them to clear out to make room for Paris and her crew. The "Fashion Police" star, never one to keep these things quiet, called Paris out on Twitter.

"@ParisHilton please grow up there is no need to act like a child you could of happily joined us! it's not 2005 no one cares!," she wrote.

However, Hilton may have matured since her feud-starting heyday: Sources say it was the event's organizers, not Paris, who decided to clear the table, and Paris had no idea Kelly was even there. In her response she sounds genuinely mystified.

"@KellyOsbourne, getting tweets about us. I'm confused, as I did not see you once this entire weekend. No clue how these stories get invented," she wrote.

That's a very cordial response to a provocative tweet. Maybe Paris has matured. Or maybe it's part of a larger plan to win this feud. That's how the game is played, my friends. Maybe. I'm not really sure what the game is. I've never been at a VIP table. I've barely been at a table.

Why Aaron Carter missed big bro's wedding

Not making it to your own brother's wedding? Pretty cold. But Aaron Carter, who missed his big brother Nick's nuptials this weekend, insists it wasn't for lack of trying.

"Aaron had a contract to appear at the Cherry Blossom Festival in D.C. before Nick set his wedding date. Even though he was obligated to fulfill his contract, Aaron still wanted to make the wedding," his rep tells E! News. "There was a team of six people who worked to get him to Santa Barbara by the reception so he could at least participate in the celebration. He was on his way when his U.S. Airways plane experienced mechanical difficulties in Pittsburgh and they were grounded. Aaron was legitimately busting his ass to make it to his brother's wedding. He felt awful and had every intention of being there."

Ye olde "D.C. Cherry Blossom Festival" excuse, huh Aaron? In any case, it's not like he can't pick up the new issue of In Touch to see everything he missed — like this now-classic picture. Did Nick's new bride OK this before it went into a national magazine?

Garfield loves being naked

Andrew Garfield's "Amazing Spider-Man" costume is so skintight, he practically feels naked — which is just fine by him. "I love being naked," he tells Metro U.K. "It's important to be naked and be in touch with our bodies and not have shame about what we're made of. I love being in touch with nature and my own nature." Then, of course, there's the issue of how much the form-fitting Spidey suit reveals in certain delicate areas, something Garfield admits was given a lot of thought. "It takes a lot of consideration because you don't want it to be underwhelming," he joked during a TV interview in Australia recently. "You don't want it to intimidate, and you don't want it to [do] the opposite. But ultimately you have to trust that what you have is enough."

A VodCoachella for LiLo

Lindsay Lohan was reportedly spotted downing a vodka soda at the Coachella music festival this weekend, despite months of declaring her commitment to staying sober — though "no one around her was surprised" that she didn't keep her word, according to Radar Online. "Lindsay's friends and family have been hoping that she would stay sober, but they've been down this path before," a source says. "She swears she's going to do the right thing and stay sober, then she doesn't and apologizes. But she doesn't come clean to people close to her very easily."

Stealing the show at Volver

Chef de cuisine. Natalie Maronski gives a sneak peek of the restaurant, opening tonight.

A menu four months — plus 15 years or so — in the making debuts Wednesday night when Volver opens in the Kimmel Center. Chef Jose Garces' newest restaurant, an exclusive, intimate locale, is inspired by his extensive travels in the states and internationally. Garces and chef de cuisine Natalie Maronski have been experimenting with translating his worldly concepts onto the plate since January.

"We started with around 20 different dishes, and we've been tweaking and fine-tuning and narrowing them down," Maronski says in the 34-seat dining room, taking a break from prep and practice two days before opening night.

The result is a multicourse, technique-heavy menu with an emphasis on seafood, offered Wednesday through Sunday evenings in a pre-theater and a later seating dubbed the "Performance."

Every dish has a story behind it; the Kentucky Fried Squab, cooked in the same pressure fryer KFC uses, is a play on Garces' memories of jaunts to the fried chicken joint with his dad as a kid. As diners, at tables arranged around an open kitchen, watch while the staff prepares plates, servers will explain how each dish came to be. "It's all part of the show," says Maronski, 30, the star performer. She plans to be in the kitchen every night. Garces might be there, roughly, around 10 nights a month, though that's subject to change.

Maronski, who's been at Garces restaurants since 2006, says her favorite "little bite" on the menu is the biscuit that comes with the squab. A favorite dish is From the Garden, which starts with baby lettuce grown at Garces' Bucks County farm and brought to Volver still in the dirt, to be plucked and washed when ordered. Nine other ingredients go onto that plate, including goat cheese mimicking soil, thanks to a spoonful of squid ink.

No refunds

Eat at Volver

Instead of reservations, a meal at Volver requires a pre-purchased, nonrefundable ticket, which currently goes for $75, $100 or $175, depending on the seating. That includes eight or 12 courses but not tax, a 20 percent tip automatically added to the total, or the optional wine pairings. For future menus, which will be adjusted with the seasons, the price range could be $75-$250.

The ticketing system is a first for the city — as Maronski says, "Philly is evolving."

The Weekly yelp

Close your eyes and picture your favorite savory dish. You're probably thinking, "It doesn't get much better than this." Oh, but it does! Not to shock anyone, but adding an egg to just about anything makes a good meal great.

My date and I split an order of crispy deviled eggs, which were amazing ... I don't even like deviled eggs, but trust me, you have to try them. MEGAN M.

Zahav

House smoked sable was really good; we wished we had two orders of this. The egg was actually inside of the challah and the challah was toasted perfectly. I still can't figure out how they got the egg inside the challah. JOYCE W.

Bar Ferdinand

Get the flatbreads! Especially the pancetta with the baked egg. They give you a spoon so you can spread all that eggy goodness. The slight crunch of the pancetta and oozy egg? Yes. JENNIFER M.

Supper

When you think of Southern comfort food, deviled eggs come to mind. ... A duo was served, with the left emanating truffle, topped with chive. The right was a blend of tomato and mozzarella, topped with basil. JOHN K.

Back in the Loop

Fading in. An influential U.K. band gets their due with reissues and first major tour in 25 years.

Whether it's architecture, fashion or music, 20th century modernism looks and sounds contemporary. Of a certain time, perhaps, but of the now, too. That's true of English experimental noise rock band Loop's three mid-1980s to early-1990s albums, "Heavens End," "Fade Out" and "A Gilded Eternity," which were reissued after the band reconvened last year for a world tour that hits the U.S. this spring. Though rooted in 1960s psychedelic agit-rock, Loop's stormy drones are agelessly futuristic.

"I like everything in the modern sense of music," says founding member Robert Hampson from his home in France. "I've managed to have my feet in more rock-bound music, but also experimental music as well. I've been lucky in that really."

It was shortly after 1990's angular, anxious "A Gilded Eternity," that Hampson pulled the plug. Still, the band's influence reached from BRMC to the Black Angels, and Loop's 23-date U.S. tour includes two shows at the Angels' Austin Psych Fest in early May. Until this tour, Loop played only 10 shows in the last 25 years. It's a curious thing why some bands stop making music, but not to Hampson.

"We'd been busy for a long time, which obviously bands shouldn't complain about," he says. "But certain things become annoyances. It got to a point where I wanted to remove myself from it and do other things. Hindsight will tell you, I just needed a six-month break and then come back to it."

Carrying on too long?

Instead of taking a break from touring, Hampson and Loop's guitarist Scott Dowson formed Main, an ethereal electronic outfit, whose exploration of minimalist trance continues to this day.

"I've always been obsessed with music; my thing was to always be in a band. Even after feeling unhappy with Loop, I decided to continue. I just carried on way too long!" Hampson says self-effacingly. "But it seems I've been able to create a career from it. It's been a long-running creative process — but, it's a job as well!"

Greg Kinnear 'for Real'

Interview. The actor swears that "Heaven is for Real" is more ambivalent than its title.

Greg Kinnear plays a father whose son claims to have seen the afterlife in "Heaven is for Real." / GETTY IMAGES

Greg Kinnear's latest film doesn't mince words with its title. "Heaven is for Real" is based on the best-selling book recounting pastor Todd Burpo's 4-year-old son's experience with the afterlife. But while some of Kinnear's co-stars have been eager to talk about their own faith, Kinnear is careful to change the subject.

The producers insist you were the first person they thought of for this role.
Yeah, I guess so. ... This is a tough one. "Heaven is for Real" is not an ambivalent title. There are certainly people who are fans of the book and I think there's a lot of other people approaching it with much more skepticism. But I felt that the movie did a really nice job of telling the story of this family as honestly and truthfully as it can be done.

What I found really interesting about it was that so much blowback to the boy's claims came from members of the family's church.
Yes, absolutely. That's what hooked me. There's a version of this movie where the kid comes to his pastor father and says, "Everything I saw is consistent with what you think," and the dad high-fives him and that's the end of the movie. They walk off into the sunset. [Laughs]

That's a short movie.
[Laughs] But I feel like the notion here that the son is basically confirming the father's heartfelt belief would be a starting point for him to start to have some sort of internal struggle. His own personal crisis was a really crazy, upside-down way into the story that I wasn't anticipating.

Have you had to field a lot of questions about your own beliefs?
I'm reticent to talk about my own faith in small sound bites. I feel like it's a bit of a distraction from the really nice job Randy [Wallace, the director] did.

Q&A

Screen to stage

What do you think of the fact that they've turned "Little Miss Sunshine" into a musical?
Oh, I don't know. You can turn just about anything into musical if it's well done and well written. I don't rule out any subject matter, but I hope that if they do it, that it will be good and that I'll want to pay my hundred dollars or whatever they're charging on Broadway these days. By the way, I'm joking. I'll expect free tickets.

I would think that they would comp you for that.
You sure would think so, but Hollywood is strange.

‘Orphan Black’ returns with ‘crazy clone’ fun

Interview. Showrunner Graeme Manson dishes on the new season.

“Orphan Black” is the little show that could. It had a few things working against it: There’s a sci-fi premise, the series was unfamiliar to audiences and it depends entirely on one actress to carry the whole show.

That’s right: Tatiana Maslany plays the three main characters and the villain this season (she played seven last season) because they’re all clones.

But “Orphan Black,” returning this Saturday at 9 p.m. on BBC America, has managed to gain quite a bit of traction, and the show’s self-named “Clone Club” fans have much to look forward to this season.

Showrunner Graeme Manson promises plenty of “crazy clone shenanigans” to come. The main theme of the season? “We are stronger together,” he says.

“One of the things I’m most excited about in Season 2 is peeling back the layers of Rachel, our new pro-clone who we introduced at the end of last season,” Manson says, adding, “Tatiana really does a fabulous job with her.”

You can also expect what Manson calls “a Sarah/Rachel war” to provide more details about Sarah and even Rachel herself.

And lest you get too concerned about the much-beloved scientist clone Cosima, last seen dramatically coughing up blood, Manson says she’s his favorite clone. Wait, that means she’s going to be OK, right? Manson wouldn’t confirm or deny that Cosima would be healthy and happy by the end of the season.

Jordan Gavaris on Felix’s season

Gavaris, who plays Felix, foster brother to main clone Sarah, talks about what’s ahead for him.

The Season 2 poster seemed to imply that Felix and Alison will be getting closer this season.

You may be on to something. I think that poster’s filled with Easter eggs. Felix and Alison do have a close relationship this season. ... There’s a real point of contention between Felix and Sarah that will come to a head and Felix will make a decision.

Small space,

Treehouse. Natalie Decleve invites us into her space-challenged, style-saturated apartment.

Despite the towering ceilings and enviable exposed brick, it's easy to see how Natalie Decleve's apartment could be considered a challenge. Perched above the streets of the West Village, the light-filled space — which the blogger and stylist affectionately refers to as her "treehouse" — measures only 400 square feet, very few of which are dedicated to closets.

In the talented hands of Decleve, however, it feels more luxury loft than cramped quarters, striking the perfect balance between cozy and curated. We hit her up for some space-conscious, budget-friendly design tips.

Decleve is in her element in her small but spacious-looking space. For more stylish tips, pay a visit to Decleve's blog: www.nattystylenyc.com. / ALL PHOTOS NATASHA JAHANGIR

Use what you've got

The high ceilings in Decleve's apartment make it feel (and function) like a much larger space. "I placed artwork high and hung a chandelier to draw the eye upward," she says. "For storage, I designed a custom closet through the Elfa system at the Container Store. This way, I use every inch of my space from floor to ceiling."

Expert advice

Get crafty with storage

Rare is the tiny apartment with generous storage space, but a little creativity can make up for that MIA linen closet. "Use decorative boxes to stash things under the sofa, and buy furniture with built-in drawers and shelves," advises Decleve. "A storage bed with built-in drawers is the best way to maximize under-bed space and keep it looking clean, but the Container Store sells tons of bins designed specially to fit under the bed."

Stash belongings creatively.

On a budget

Shopping secrets

1 Craigslist and Etsy
"Be specific about what you're looking for to get the best results. Rather than searching 'wooden coffee table,' try 'Danish modern wooden coffee table,'" Decleve suggests. "If you see something in a store that's too expensive directly from the retailer, try searching for it by name, such as 'Restoration Hardware Odeon chandelier.'"

2 Apartment Therapy
Compared to Craigslist, Decleve says the popular home decor blog's classified listings are "far more curated and better for browsing."

3 One Kings Lane
This online discount retailer specializes in home furnishings.

4 Flea markets
"Don't be afraid to negotiate!" says Decleve.

Decleve positions artwork high on the wall to draw the eye upward and create the illusion of more space.

Put your life on display

Not everything needs to be stowed away. When space is limited, treat your prettier possessions as decorations. "In a small space, everything becomes part of the decor," says Decleve. "Display items in pretty vessels — a basket or metal wine tub makes a great scarf holder, while vintage dishes and empty candle vases are great for storing jewelry. Nice heels and bags can become part of the decor if properly placed."

Furnish with caution

When there isn't much space to spare, your furniture has to be spot-on. "Since there's not room for a lot, it's important to really love what you have. Invest in focal pieces," says Decleve. "Also, try to make sure there's no wasted space due to ill-fitting furniture — take thorough measurements of every nook and cranny before you buy. Having a loveseat without arms takes up less visual space, and always try to keep furniture proportional to the space and the other items around it."

From the experts

Dr. Anthony Rossi, an award-winning dermatologist at JUVA Skin & Laser Center in New York, says some ingredients to avoid include formaldehyde releasers, parabens and heavy metals such as lead.

Repêchage CEO and founder Lydia Sarfati says to avoid exfoliators and facial scrubs that are labeled polyethylene and contain plastic microbeads.

"Plastic microbeads not only leave microscopic tears on your skin — which cause inflammation — but they are harmful to the environment," she says. "These microbeads pollute bodies of water inhabited by fish who consume them and are unfortunately killed as a result."

A VIDEO GAME WHERE YOU PLAY A GOAT? HECK, YEAH!

Some games are easy to put a bow on and call it a day. First-person shooters, RPGs and stealth titles all fall in that category. Other games, however, are more like a Las Vegas mescaline bender. Here are reviews of some weirdo gems.

'Goat Simulator'

System: PC
Company: Coffee Stain Studios

● ● ● ● ○

Throughout the history of video games, there has been one glaring omission: the ability to simulate life as a gravity-defying goat. Don't worry! That egregious error has finally been fixed. Here is "Goat Simulator," and it is a glorious exercise in utter ridiculousness.

In this game — surprise! — you control a goat. What's the point? To run around and knock stuff over, mostly. On paper, this sounds slightly repetitive and dull. In practice, however, it is more fun than controlling a virtual goat has any right to be. The world is open, the physics are utterly ridiculous and the goat is pissed. You haven't lived until you've exploded a car with an errant apple.

'Monument Valley'

System: iOS
Company: Ustwo

● ● ● ● ●

Now that you've successfully destroyed a small town as a goat, it's time for you to finally embody an M.C. Escher drawing. This bizarre and beautiful title has you solving puzzles amidst a constantly changing 2-D/3-D space. It owes thanks to similar titles that explored the intersection of dimensions, like "Fez" and "Super Paper Mario," but it is more than the sum of its influences.

"Goat Simulator" is more or less exactly what it sounds like. / COFFEE STAIN STUDIOS

First off, this game is beautiful and captures a painting-like aesthetic not seen often in gaming. The gameplay reminds this jaded gamer of a touchscreen-enabled "Zelda" dungeon. In other words, the world is chock full of elegantly designed puzzles. It's been a while since the mobile space had a must-play title and, well, here it is.

Vevo widens ties with Yahoo

Yahoo Inc. and Vevo, an online music video hub that provides some of the most popular content on Google's YouTube, have expanded their content and regional partnership, Vevo said amid mounting competition for online viewers.

The deal brings Vevo's music videos, live concert events and other original music programming to Yahoo's video channel, Yahoo Screen, in the United States and Canada.

The reworked deal with Vevo highlights Yahoo's strategy to increase video views as the company tries to increase the time users spend on its websites.

KNOCK OFF WINTER WEIGHT GAIN

If you've gained weight over the colder months, it's time to forgive yourself and forge forward with these strategic tips to cut calories, rev metabolism and suppress appetite so you can whip your body into seasonal shape.

Cut calories by:

1 Swapping starch with cauliflower. Cauliflower is a huge bargain at just 25 calories per cup, and once you start experimenting, you'll be amazed at how versatile this veggie is. You can make cauliflower mashed "potatoes," blend it into a creamy soup, create a cauliflower pizza crust or make "rice." The possibilities are endless, and I've seen all sorts of cauliflower concoctions popping up on restaurant menus.

2 Going topless. Eat sandwiches and burgers without a top slice of bread to immediately cut 100 calories from your meal. Plus, in some instances you'll also lose a layer of mayo that typically goes on the top slice, saving another 100 calories each time. If you'd like to up the ante, try to go totally bread-less, and wrap your sammies and burgers in lettuce "toast" or use grilled portobello mushroom caps as a bun.

More tricks

Suppress your appetite by adding:

1 The scent of peppermint. Light a peppermint candle, chew on peppermint gum or sip on peppermint tea. A study found that when participants smelled peppermint every two hours, they consumed nearly 3,000 fewer total calories and rated their hunger level significantly lower than participants not exposed to peppermint.

2 1 tablespoon of chia seeds to your daily menu. Chia seeds swell up in your digestive tract, taking the edge off your hunger. In fact, they are able to absorb 9-10 times their weight in water! That, in addition to their whopping 5 grams of fiber per tablespoon, make these nutrition sprinkles especially filling. Add 1 tablespoon anywhere.

Heath notes

Rev your metabolism by enjoying:

1 Shrimp cocktail. As the skinniest appetizer in town, each shrimp is just about 8 calories and because it's pure protein, it revs your metabolism and helps to keep you feeling full (protein is harder to digest than carbs and fat, so your body works hard to break it down and you get an uptick in your metabolism as a result). Bonus: The spicy cocktail sauce amplifies metabolic burn and helps squelch your appetite.

2 Greek yogurt. Just like shrimp, the high protein content here takes your digestive system longer to break down, meaning that it revs your engine and ups your calorie burn. Greek yogurt makes a perfect grab-and-go breakfast with a banana or an energizing afternoon snack. Or use plain nonfat Greek yogurt as a sub for sour cream or mayo.

Not all fish oils created equal

Location of study: U.S.
Study targets: 30 fish oil supplements currently on the market
Results: A recent report of various fish oil supplements found four out of 30 products to have quality problems, "such as less EPA or DHA than claimed or an incomplete list of ingredients," says Dr. Tod Cooperman, president of ConsumerLab.com.
Significance: If you have the choice of eating fish twice a week or taking a supplement, Cooperman says there are more benefits to eating fish. But for people who don't eat fish, finding a good supplement can be worthwhile. When shopping for a fish oil supplement, Cooperman suggests checking out the Supplement Facts label on the bottle to make sure the product actually states how much EPA and DHA is in it. "You can get a high-quality fish oil supplement for as little as a few cents a day," he says.

Ovarian cancer risk linked to irregular periods

Location of study: U.S.
Study subjects: Over 15,000 pregnant women
Results: The results from a 50-year study suggest that women who have irregular periods may be 2.4 times more likely to develop ovarian cancer. The risk appears to be even higher for women with a family history of the disease in a first-degree relative (parent, sibling or child). Women whose cycles lasted longer than 35 days were particularly at risk. Researchers speculate that polycystic ovarian syndrome might be responsible.
Significance: Ovarian cancer is the most deadly reproductive cancer in women. There are currently no screenings in place for early diagnosis, which means that the majority of women who get it don't know until it's too late. Cohn says the study's findings are not meant to alarm women who have irregular periods. She notes that the increased average risk is still small because of how rare the cancer is. Even so, she hopes that by better understanding how irregular cycles are correlated with ovarian cancer, researchers may someday find a way to prevent it.

Does your baby have a hidden agenda? / PURESTOCK

Study

Are breast-fed infants trying to prevent a new sibling?

Location of study: Worldwide
Study subjects: Multiple studies over many years
Theory: The act of breast-feeding not only brings mom and baby closer together — it also serves as a natural form of birth control. The same hormones that produce milk in nursing women also suppress the hormones that trigger ovulation. The phenomenon, known as lactational amenorrhea, can be up to 98 percent effective in preventing pregnancy if a woman breast-feeds every two to three hours. But are babies who wake up for middle-of-the-night feedings trying to delay the birth of a sibling with whom they'd have to compete? Some experts say yes. "It's an evolutionary response," says David Haig, a professor in the Department of Organismic and Evolutionary Biology at Harvard.
Significance: "The suggestion is that babies that wake and suckle in the night tend to have longer time spans in between the birth of a sibling, which is linked to longer survival," says Haig. Researchers believe that the benefits of delaying ovulation are substantial enough to have triggered a real evolutionary response. Even today, where reliable contraceptives are accessible, many newborns still wake to breast-feed every two hours. The theory suggests that babies begin tapering off their feedings when it's safe for mom to resume ovulation.

In the eye of the beholder

Jennifer [Matrone], you make it seem like Miranda Kerr was doing an Internet porn shoot. While there is a fine line between classy and unclassy pictures (which can be difficult to discern at times), Kerr wasn't showing off everything in sex-crazed poses; she wasn't the Venus de Milo but still classy nonetheless.

Girl, please

RE: 'Heather Dubrow: Getting real in the O.C.,' April 14, 2014
Perhaps I am not qualified to make this observation since I have never watched the show, but I wondered at Heather Dubrow's usage of the word "girl" throughout her interview. I looked at her picture and she definitely qualifies for the use of the term "woman." But perhaps it isn't the age in years but maturity level that warrants the "girl" description?

Mason's status unknown

The Flyers are optimistic that Steve Mason can play Thursday night in Game 1 of the Eastern Conference playoffs against the Rangers. Mason practiced with the team in Vorhees on Tuesday, but only about 15 minutes. He is currently day-to-day. "That's not been determined yet," Flyers coach Craig Berube told reporters of his likelihood to start.

Wenger has big shoes to fill on Union attack

MLS. Lancaster County native Andrew Wenger will feel pressure to fill the shoes of departed forward Jack McInerney.

Fans of the Union were left baffled and shocked just a couple weeks ago as highly popular forward and scorer Jack McInerney was traded to the Montreal Impact in exchange for forward Andrew Wenger.

Going by simply stats, there was a lot to be upset about. McInerney had scored 25 goals in his young career and looked to be emerging as one of the best scorers in the MLS, registering a career-high 12 goals in 2013.

Wenger was widely viewed as a disappointment. He scored just six goals in two seasons with the Impact after being selected as the No. 1 pick in 2012. All that changed on Saturday after Wenger found the back of the net against Real Salt Lake to put the Union on the board in an eventual 2-2 tie.

"[The goal] helped to prove myself to this team, but it's also nice to get the monkey off my back," Wenger said. "Hopefully more will follow."

Union fans will surely keep an eye on McInerney the rest of the season. He had a goal of his own Saturday in a 1-1 draw against the Chicago Fire. But Wenger hopes that his play the rest of the year can silence some of the comparisons.

Quoted

"I grew up in the area and am a little more familiar with how they are. I understand how a Philly fan thinks and I guess there's a little bit of a Philly fan inside myself." Wenger

"Being a forward you're always expected to score goals," Wenger said. "I don't think it really matters who I was traded for, it's just one of the expectations that goes with playing this position. From a team standpoint expectations may be higher but I don't feel any added pressure from the fans."

The Union (1-1-4) head down I-95 Wednesday to face the New York Red Bulls (0-1-4). Wenger and the Union offense will have a tough task facing goalie Luis Robles who leads the MLS in saves with 26.

"He's a fantastic goalkeeper," Wenger said. "Like any other game you just want to take your chances well and put the ball where it can't reach him."

The game will air at 7:30 p.m. on The Comcast Network.

Union travel north to face New York

Wednesday night will mark the 11th time the Union and Red Bulls have faced off. Last season in three meetings, the teams split the series 1-1-1. New York seeks to end a six-game winless streak to start the year (0-2-4). METRO

NBA. Carter-Williams, Sixers end season at home on high note

Michael Carter-Williams has been a bright spot all year. / GETTY IMAGES

The 2013-14 season for the 76ers has nearly come to a close. Though they face the Heat in Miami Wednesday night in game No. 82, they went out on a good note at home, downing the Celtics for the second time this season, 113-108 at the Wells Fargo Center on Monday.

The season will surely be remembered for the losses — 26 in a row at one point and over 60 overall. But first year head coach Brett Brown won't necessarily recall the campaign for its perilous losses.

"I actually think in a very twisted way that I'm going to look back at this year, and look back at guys who just played their tails off," Brown said. "They came in and there were no expectations and they played and developed and got NBA minutes. They looked at me and I looked at them and we incredibly survived a year like this."

The great majority of them simply survived. But Michael Carter-Williams thrived.

It was a losing, frustrating environment, but the first-round pick from Syracuse seems likely to bring home Rookie of the Year honors. His 21 points, career-high 14 rebounds, six assists and four steals only furthered his cause to take home the hardware, a foregone conclusion now.

The real light at the end of the season-long struggle is the upcoming draft. The Sixers could have two first-round lottery picks. They also have stockpiled five second rounders. They have a returning borderline All-Star in Thaddeus Young, and a healthy Nerlens Noel next season.

They might not quite be on the verge of a breakthrough, but they are much closer now than they were at the start of the year. Brown, Carter-Williams and whoever else joins them next year will hopefully look back at 2013-14 as a footnote, and the beginning of a new winning tradition in South Philadelphia.

- 1.88 steals per game
- 12 double-doubles

NBA power rankings | by James Toscano

No. 1

Spurs (62-19)

Fitting that the Spurs close out the regular season as our No. 1. They'll finish with the best record in the NBA, but they'll continue to be known as the New England Patriots of basketball if they can't bring the title back to San Antonio this June.

No. 2

Thunder (58-23)

Here's hoping OKC and the Clippers meet at some point this spring. Their matchup last week was outstanding as the Clips made a late rally.

No. 3

Clippers (56-24)

In April, the Clippers have lost to the Mavericks and Thunder but beat the Suns, Lakers and Kings. But this will mean nothing when the playoffs begin.

No. 4

Blazers (53-28)

It seems as though the Blazers are back on track after a sluggish March. They won four in a row — the longest win streak in the NBA right now.

No. 5

Rockets (54-27)

The Rockets did not mess around Monday with a chance to secure home court advantage, beating the Spurs, 104-98, to send a message to the Western Conference.

Heat (54-27)

Miami had been focusing on one game for weeks — last Friday's matchup against the Pacers. LeBron James was dominant, scoring 36 points, and the Heat beat the Pacers, 98-86, in what could be a conference finals preview.

No. 7

Pacers (55-26)

The Pacers received way too much press way too soon, it seems, and Frank Vogel now looks more like the overwhelmed video coordinator he used to be than any sort of Coach of the Year candidate.

No. 8

Warriors (50-31)

Golden State center Andrew Bogut fractured a rib and could miss the entire postseason. That means a lot more Jermaine O'Neal in the postseason.

No. 9

Grizzlies (49-32)

The Grizzlies are in the playoffs and did so the old fashioned way by earning it with a 97-91 road victory over the Suns on Monday.

No. 10

Mavericks (49-32)

There's the distinct chance that Dallas could be the ones knocking off the big guns in the West this spring. If Monta Ellis stays hot, they can beat anyone.

No. 11

Raptors (48-33)

There is only one Canadian team in this year's Stanley Cup playoffs, so sports fans up north are shifting their attention to the hardwood. Seriously.

No. 12

Bulls (48-33)

The Bulls and Suns were the feel-good stories of the NBA regular season. In the end, Phoenix didn't make the postseason. The Bulls will, but all signs lead to the squad running out of gas.
